

Sirs: I recently became aware of the Consumer Bankers Association's (CBA) recent challenge to Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. The CBA is attempting to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana consumers. If this is successful, it would be a patent FRAUD. Telephone privacy should be the right of all Indiana citizens. We should, as consumers, be able to choose who intrudes into our private homes via the telephone, WHETHER OR NOT we have had any sort of business business relationship with them. The negative impact of unsolicited calls on peoples' lives far outweigh any valid business reason that a company would have to make that intrusive call.

Thanks for the consideration for consumer privacy.
